

LANGUAGE DERANGEMENT SYNDROME

Let me begin by parodying the late great Winston Churchill about transgenders. “Never in the field of human sexuality has so much attention been paid by so many to so few.” The ongoing idiotic attempt at the mutilation of language in an attempt to render it genderless has now once again raised its confused head in the cheesy state of Wisconsin where the linguistically perverted Governor Tony Evers has in his deep and muddled wisdom decided to substitute the word “mother” with the words “inseminated person.” That should work out nicely.... Little Billy cried out as tears streamed down his face, “Oh, inseminated person I fell off my tricycle and cut my knee! It’s bleeding!” Yeah, that works. Could a human being get any denser than this farcical clown? If I had voted for this inept imbecile I would in my embarrassment dig a hole, climb in and scoop the dirt in on top of myself with my bare hands.

In most parts of our union, mothers breast feed their babies, but apparently in Wisconsin inseminated persons chest feed their offspring. This must be very confusing to Wisconsin’s dairy farmers and quite dangerous as they attempt to hook up bulls to milking machines. Are they next going to pass laws that half of all the cheese made in their state must be made from bull semen instead of a cow’s milk so there can be sexual equity in the dairy industry? It wouldn’t surprise me. Has it reached the point where for the sake of the deranged fringes of society, the equilibrium of the whole must now be flipped on its axis?

Now if you are a homosexual male or a lesbian or that thing that is called a transgender I don’t care. I really don’t. I really, really don’t. Knock yourself out. It’s your life and what you do with it is your business. BUT that does not mean I am compelled to rearrange my life, my beliefs, or change my use of language to satisfy your fantasies of a genderless world. That world does not exist, and it never will, and any attempt to create it is going to fail because mammalian biology is not going to be overcome by newspeak because people smart or dumb, educated or not, are always going to see the obvious and live accordingly.

For almost fifty years now those on the sexual outliers of society have been trying to recruit the mainstream into embracing a lifestyle which for most of us is seen as unhealthy, abnormal and in contrast to the evolutionary order of nature. The sexual revolution was correct in its assertion that all consenting adults should have the right to express their sexual orientation, but they were wholly incorrect in the assertion that they have a special set of rights due to their otherness. Our constitution guarantees one set of rights for everyone without special guarantees to certain groups due to any kind of special status. In our country a straight mother and a lesbian woman have the same set of rights, no more no less, and having an imbecilic governor playing alphabet soup with the legislative language does not change that. Childish semantics cannot obscure the fact that our chromosomes determine our sex.

George Orwell in his epic book 1984 wrote extensively on the potential for the intentionally destructive use of language to corrupt free thought for as he said, "There is no swifter route to the corruption of thought than through the corruption of language." That is exactly what we have going on here in the language used in the words of the present legislation in Wisconsin. It is a deliberate and premeditated attempt to confuse and undermine the rational and the obvious with the nefarious intention of promoting the ideology of a genderless society which in no way shape or form exists but in the minds of scattered miscreants on the edges of civilized society.

Let me be blunt. There is no such thing as a transgender. It is a social invention. A lifestyle choice. Period. Yes, there are women assuming the lifestyles of men and men assuming the roles of women and that is their right and psychologically these individuals may truly feel compelled to assume the identity of their opposite gender, but they can't change the reality of who their chromosomes say they are. Language can't change that fact, medication can't change that fact, even surgery cannot change that fact. Of course, there are the rare genetic deformities that do occur but to criminally claim that they are the basis of the transgender movement is an outright lie and a deliberate falsehood.

A man can have silicone implants to enhance his breasts and augment them with hormonal medication. He can even have his testicles and penis surgically removed but at the end of the day he is still biologically male. He may look female but if tested his twenty third pair of chromosomes would still show, even after all the drugs and surgery, one x chromosome and one y chromosome, the biological definition of a male. For if he were truly female his twenty third pair of chromosomes would both be x chromosomes. As the old saying goes, you can't fool mother nature.

However, there are those like the Governor of Wisconsin who wish to fool us by manipulating the language by defining something by what it is not, and rational people must resist this misuse of language to undermine reality. For as George Orwell said, "We have sunk so low it has become the obligation of every decent thinking individual to restate the obvious." So, let's inject some of the obvious into the national conversation. The world is round. It orbits the sun. Women have two x chromosomes in their twenty third pair. Only women produce breast milk, get pregnant and give birth. Gravity is a fact. Water consists of two molecules of hydrogen and one molecule of oxygen. Biological males have one x chromosome and one y chromosome in their twenty-third pair. Only men have testicles. Only men produce semen. The sky is blue. The moon orbits the earth. There are nine planets in our solar system. You see Governor Evers some things are just plainly obvious even to the dumbest among us. Do humanity a favor. Grow up and book a flight to the real world? Okay?
